Freelancer Launches Exciting New Features with Freelancer Android App 2.0

SYDNEY, September 24, 2014: Freelancer.com has announced the biggest change yet to its mobile offering with the release of Freelancer for Android version 2.0, bringing freelancers and employers new features and tools to work anywhere, anytime and with anyone.

The latest version of the Freelancer Android App allows freelancers to not only explore the thousands of new jobs posted daily, but also to communicate with their employers, bid on and accept available jobs. Employers will be able to post projects straight from their mobile, review and award work to the freelancer of their choice and manage projects from wherever they are.

“At Freelancer.com, we aim to make our users truly ‘free’ - free from their desks and offices,” Ilter Dumduz, Product Director for Freelancer.com said. “Imagine being in transit while posting a project on the Freelancer Android App and having the task underway before you reach your destination - it’s the future of work.”

Freelancer.com data shows that being mobile is extremely valuable to its community of freelancers and employers with 43 of the top 100 earning freelancers using the Freelancer App.

“We want to give our users the same features they can find on our website, Freelancer.com, in the convenience of their mobile phone,” said Dumduz. “With the App, freelancers and employers are location-independent while working on great projects, and we’re not stopping here - We will continuously add new features and functionality to our app.”

Freelancer Android App is available immediately in the Google Play store.
